

A close-up photograph of a sunflower head, showing the intricate pattern of the seeds. The seeds are a mix of brown and green, and many of them are covered with small, glistening water droplets, suggesting they have been recently watered or are in a humid environment. The background is a soft, out-of-focus yellow, likely the petals of the sunflower.

Job 24:08 They are wet with the showers of the mountains, and embrace the rock for want of a shelter.