

A close-up photograph of a garden. The foreground is dominated by a large, vibrant purple flower with five petals. Behind it, several bright yellow flowers are in bloom, their petals slightly ruffled. The background is filled with lush green foliage, including small, rounded leaves and some taller, thin blades. The lighting is bright, creating a sense of depth and highlighting the textures of the petals and leaves.

Hebrews 12:27 And this word , Yet once more, signifieth the removing of those things that are shaken, as of things that are made, that those things which cannot be shaken may remain.