

A scenic view of a river flowing through a rocky canyon. The river is a vibrant greenish-blue, contrasting with the grey and brown tones of the surrounding rock formations. The canyon walls are rugged and layered, with some sparse green vegetation clinging to the upper slopes. In the foreground, there is a dense thicket of dry, tangled branches and twigs, some of which are light brown and appear to be dead or dormant. The overall atmosphere is one of a wild, natural landscape.

Romans 02:15 Which show the work of the law written in their hearts, their conscience also bearing witness, and their thoughts the man while accusing or else excusing one another;